

The Adirondack landscape is supremely beautiful, endowed with lofty mountains and rich northern forests reflected in over 2800 lakes and ponds and thousands of flowering waterways. Imprinted with four distinct seasons, the scenery evolves continually. Each season brings new wonders and challenges, yet this landscape retains a sense of place unique in our nation - a distinctly Adirondack heart and soul. Photographed over several years, spanning the geographic diversity of the six million acre Adirondack Park, Mark Bowie presents a breathtaking tribute to the ever-changing seasons that decorate this magnificent assemblage of mountains, woods and waters
